CORRUPTION

How to fight corruption most effectively by carefully studying the context

Maral Muratbekova-Touron, Camilla Lee Park and Mauro Fracaroli Nunes – The World Economic Forum: 25 November 2022

Research shows that the answer to what constitutes corruption depends on the importance of informal networks in your country, whether you belong to one and who benefits from their use. Understanding corruption as a context-dependent phenomenon could help fight it more efficiently.

Iraq’s Parliament discusses controversial cyber crimes bill

Sinan Mahmoud – The National MENA: 21 November 2022

There are widespread objections to a bill that proposes heavy prison sentences and fines for peaceful online expressions of dissent in Iraq. Anyone found to be threatening the country’s “independence, unity, safety and its economic, political, military and security interests” would face life imprisonment, according to a copy of the bill.
